Our 2011 Conference promises to be even more powerful and exciting than last year! Our 2011 Education Law Conference will offer outstanding teaching as well as rich opportunities to exchange ideas, dialogue with AALRR attorneys, and network with other members of the education community. Educators and administrators will become more aware of the legal developments they need to know within the framework of their day-to-day business challenges. Attendees can choose three workshops from the nine offered and will receive conference materials that will serve as an excellent resource throughout the year.

Our event combines our annual "It's the Law Now" seminar with our fall Education Law Conference. This legislative review provides a comprehensive legislative notebook, on which you have come to depend, which will be included in the Conference materials.

Atkinson, Andelson, Loya, Ruud & Romo continues to incorporate an education outreach component, Booksmart© into our conference. The firm believes in supporting school district library initiatives and, as such, is offering all attendees at our conference the opportunity to win books for their district's library collection. Based on the number of attendees, a certain percentage will win a gift certificate entitling them to the purchase of books. Winners will receive a certificate and Scholastic catalogue for them to take back to their district to help them decide which books best meet their needs. The winners are our children and youth who benefit from the use of additional teaching aids!
